

New collaboration with World of Safety & Health Asia (WSHAsia) and IOSH Singapore to improve access to safety and health resources in Asia-Pacific

The Singapore Branch of IOSH, the Institution Occupational Safety and Health, has joined several industry associations in supporting the newly launched World of Safety & Health Asia (WSHAsia) online platform.

WSHASIA.COM is the only online platform in the Asia-Pacific region that focuses on safety and health. Its mission is to provide a free platform that allows safety and health products and services providers around the world to showcase their solutions in this region.

Access to these resources in the Asia-Pacific region can be limited. WSHASIA.COM enables safety professionals around the world to easily access safety and health solutions available internationally.

As part of the collaboration, all IOSH events, courses and news in the Asia-Pacific region will be shared on WSHASIA.COM. IOSH members in this region will also receive a monthly WSHAsia newsletter.

Raymond Wat, Founder of WSHAsia, said: “Our new safety and health online platform is supported by six other local and international industry associations. We are very excited to have IOSH supporting us as well in this global effort to promote the sharing of information in our safety industry.”

Darren Brunton, Chair of IOSH’s Singapore Branch, said: “We believe this is an excellent initiative that will enable a broader reach and collaboration across the WSH industry sectors, while engaging businesses, associations, authorities and individuals to share and grow our safety community.”

WSHAsia is calling on likeminded stakeholders to use the free platform to post safety-and-health-related products, services solutions, news, events and courses.
