Selling Corporate Governance

This superb executive development masterclass equips Board directors to recognise their OSH responsibilities and to take full advantage of the opportunities that a thorough, strategic and long-term focus on this vital discipline can deliver for their organisation.

All successful businesses have good corporate governance at the core of their operations – a framework of rules and practices that serve to ensure the accountability of the Board for everything that happens within the organisation.

Delegates will recognise that the most important consideration for a Board is the safety and health of its employees.

Your delivery of this masterclass will show how a focus on safety, health and wellbeing at the highest level can integrate with the principles of good governance to effect a practical and cultural shift that creates a measurable business advantage.

The Corporate Governance masterclass will empower Boards to position OSH as a key business objective and align it with other significant business focuses.

The most senior leaders will be enabled to health-check their current approach, evaluate the strategic strengths and weaknesses of their business and develop significant and sustainable actions for change.

There is already a huge and growing appetite for this new masterclass.

Ambitious Boards are hungry for techniques and approaches to enable them to prosper in today's competitive and fast-moving business environment. They will be highly receptive to the idea that critical and creative thinking around safety, health and wellbeing are key drivers of value within a business.

They already understand that a human-centred approach to the governance of safety and health is the defining characteristic of the world's best businesses. And they are serious about improving their reputation, resilience and results.

IOSH has built a well-deserved reputation for thought leadership and business-led rigour. With IOSH's expert content, you will help the group to review and improve the way Board members think and work together more strategically towards good corporate governance in OSH.

The masterclass

Engaging, thought-provoking and relevant – this interactive workshop will meet the needs of senior people who are accountable for the strategic direction and oversight of their organisation.

You will liaise with a contact at the organisation so that you can tailor the focus of the masterclass to suit their sector, specialism or location and to ensure you are fully familiar with their business.

Our pre-session questionnaire to each participant will allow you to gauge their level of knowledge and plan your presentation accordingly.

IOSH will provide a range of high-quality learning materials for each delegate, including the Good Governance Map to measure strengths and weaknesses and agree actions, a presentation and a Learner Pack.

You will deliver the 3.5-hour executive development masterclass, providing expert content and helping the group to review and improve the way they think and work together in a more strategic way.

The masterclass is designed to increase the confidence of a Board to measure OSH outputs effectively, helping them to identify the right questions to ask on OSH from the perspective of good governance, both as individuals and as part of a collective.

Corporate Governance is:

- engaging – group discussions centre on real-world scenarios that have a direct impact on delegates' own responsibilities
- challenging – delegates are asked to consider difficult questions and to strive to develop workable suggestions and solutions
- reflective – delegates think about issues raised during the session and are tasked with disseminating new ideas throughout their business.

Delegates will learn to:

- highlight breakdowns and success factors in corporate governance relating to OSH
- identify international standards occupational safety and health as well as standards relating to broader sustainability
- investigate the key questions to health-check strategic strengths and weaknesses in corporate governance and to challenge Board reports constructively
- prioritise the key principles and elements of good corporate governance
- improve corporate governance through a more integrated approach to the OSH discipline.
