Sun Awareness Week 2020: top tips on sun safety

This week (4-10 May) is Sun Awareness Week, which encourages people to regularly self-examine for signs of skin cancer and teaches everyone about the dangers of sunburn and excessive tanning.

During the Covid-19 lockdown, the week will share advice on sun protection and vitamin D to help people enjoy the sun safely throughout these difficult times.

Sun Awareness Week is organised by supporter of IOSH's award-winning No Time to Lose (NTL) campaign the British Association of Dermatologists, a charity that practices teaching, training and research of dermatology.

Worldwide, non-melanoma skin cancer is the most frequently diagnosed cancer, with an estimated 2-3 million cases registered every year.

Protect yourself and your employees from harmful ultraviolet radiation from the sun when outdoors, whether at work or play. Follow these steps:
